A marriage of a singular character took place at the Registrar's Office, Lutongport. The bride and bridegroom, supported by the usual escort, having presented themselves, the registrar requested the witness to be seated, and, addressing the bridegroom and lady who remained standing, elicited from them solemn declarations of knowing no lawful impediment standing joined in matrimony. Having done these, he went to witness that the bridegroom had married his own sister. The marriage, of course, was invalid, and, after rearranging the parties, the wedding was performed with the proper principals.
